Classification markings

A classified computer game must display the classification marking if available for sale. This is the classification (rating) of the game as well as consumer advice which highlights the highest level content. It is against the law to sell a computer game without a marking. Further information is at:

<http://www.classification.gov.au/Industry/Journey/Pages/I-want-to-sell-a-computer-game.aspx>

Advertising

Advertising for a classified computer game is also required to display a classification marking. Further information is at
